TU Delft is an internationally oriented research university. In agreement with the Bologna Declaration and its follow up, The Netherlands has adopted the 3-cycle BSc-MSc-PhD system. In 2011 TU Delft established a TU Delft Graduate School. The aim is to provide better education & training for the PhD candidates. University wide several measures have been implemented, ranging from the intake process to doctoral education. The philosophy is, that each PhD from Delft university should have a number of skills and qualifications, all at the highest possible level. Moreover, a PhD is not the end but rather the beginning of a career. Each career is different and many of our graduates go to industry or organisations other than universities. In the presentation I will highlight various aspects and discuss the underlying reasons for organising the Graduate School the Delft way.
